1. On 25 October, 1951, at about 6:00 P.M. Marshal Konstantin Rokossowski, accompanied by two Soviet and two Polish generals and a Polish lieutenant colonel, was observed arriving in Odraport from an inspection trip to Swinemünde following night maneuvers which were performed along a major portion of the coast of Usedom Island; they left for Stettin at 6:40 P.M. by train. All conversation was conducted in Russian. Taking part in the maneuvers were various air force and artillery units including searchlights. Aerial bombardment was simulated by land explosions.
2. Plenary powers in the border and coastal areas have been granted to Marshal Konstantin Rokossowski by the Polish government. It is feared that this will lead to new forced relocations of large numbers of the Polish coastal population.
3. From 1948 until the present, Soviet troops have been absent from Köslin province, but Soviet army units are now being brought to Köslin (Koszalin) province again. Railroad trains are the only means of transportation employed for these troops. The barracks located at Belgard (Bialogard) and at Neustettin (Szczecinek) have been filled with Soviet troops, belonging for the most part to infantry, artillery, armored and motorized units. Equipment for these units continues to arrive every day. Soviet troops are also being stationed in the area of Schneidemühl (Pila).
4. With the exception of the airfield located at Plathe (Ploty) southwest of Kolberg, where a small Polish air force squadron is stationed, the provinces of Stettin and Köslin are occupied by Soviet, rather than Polish, air force units.
5. Along the coast of Usedom Island, fortifications are being constructed solely by Soviet troops.
6. A squadron (Eskadra) of nine YAK-21 jet aircraft is permanently stationed on Boernerowo airfield. The squadron belongs to the P.A.F. and its aircraft bear Polish recognition markings.
